The Freedmen

Colonel Samuel Thomas, head of the Freedmen's Bureau in Mississippi, proposed to Provisional Governor Sharkey to transfer to the civil authorities of the State the right to try all cases in which freedmen are parties, civil or criminal, which right has hitherto been exercised by the Freedmen's Bureau. The transfer was coupled with one condition—the testimony of the freedmen was to be admitted before the State Courts. Governor Sharkey readily accepted the offer, and thereupon proclaimed, as in duty bound, notifying all Courts and everybody else that hence forth Mississippi is to have the sole management of her own "niggers." There can be no doubt that Colonel Samuel Thomas had his orders to make this proposition from President Johnson, and there is no doubt in our mind if the President's plan of reconstruction is not wrong from the beginning, that Mississippi has just as good a right to try cases in which her freedmen are parties as California has to settle disputes between negroes and whites, or Chinamen and whites, without the interference of the Federal Government. If Mississippi is still a sovereign State, if she never ceased to be a sovereign State in the Union, what is to prevent her exercising the same powers of sovereignty that California exercises?

A Mr. McGowan, of the Abbeville South Carolina, Congressional District, announces himself a candidate for Congress. His platform is—first, that he was a rebel and is not and ought not to deny or be ashamed of it. Second, that any South Carolinian who does so disgraces his State as to deny that she was right in rebelling ought to be kicked out of the State. Third, that South Carolina must have full control of her black population. Here again, we are bound to admit that if the President's policy is correct, McGowan is also correct. The negroes of South Carolina were all loyal, the whites all traitors. The traitors are not only all pardoned, but asked to vote a new constitution and set up the State Government, controlling it themselves, while the loyal blacks are given to understand that they will soon be handed over to be dealt with by traitor courts and traitor juries, as they shall see proper; and Provisional Governor Perry, the dearly beloved of the President, tells the people of his State that whoever they may elect to Congress, the President does not intend they shall be compelled to take the prescribed oath of loyalty. That lets Mr. McGowan in on his platform. It also lets emancipation out. For who does not know the virtual re-enslavement of the blacks is inevitable if a South Carolina or a Mississippi jury is to decide upon their grievances without one chance in a thousand for appeal? Under laws passed or to be passed by Congress, for the government of the late seceded States as Federal Territories, the black man might have a chance of something approximating equal justice. Under such laws as a South Carolina or Mississippi Legislature may enact, to be administered by negro drivers as justices of the peace, and executed by Wade Hampton, he has just no show at all for his rights as a freeman. President Johnson once told a deputation of black men at Nashville very unctuously that he would be the Moses of their race to lead them into the Promise Land. He has proved as good as his word. Moses led the Israelites just near enough to the Promise Land to make their mouths water for a taste of its glories, but not a step further. Johnson has done the same for the negroes. They need a Joshua now instead of a Moses.—St. Louis Independent.

A WOOLEN MANUFACTORY.—Oregon is ahead of California in the wool manufacture, and will keep the lead and take the reputation as a wool producing and wool manufacturing State at the expense of California, unless our business men and capitalists wake up to their own interests. Oregon has already two woolen mills in constant and profitable operation, and the citizens of Jackson and Josephine counties are about to erect another. We should have half a dozen of these factories in California, and then, in proportion to the wealth, population, facilities, resources and requirements of the State, would not be as far advanced as is our Northern sister. Why should San Francisco export the raw material on every ship that sails for the East? Is it better to send it East and bring it back again than to manufacture it at home? Does the addition of the cost of exporting and importing it again add to the value of the manufactured article? There was something said about a woolen mill in this city some time ago, but the enterprise never took tangible shape. There is money in such an enterprise, and Sacramento is admirably adapted for the purpose. It is the centre of a vast sheep raising region, and hither would come the fleeces of the valley and the foothills. It can be delivered at the mills here in quantities at a less cost than at any other point in the State. Railroads and returning teams would bring it from the mountains; the farmers' wains would haul it from the surrounding ranches, without cost of freight to the manufacturer; and flatboats—the cheapest kind of transportation down stream—would fetch it from the northern counties at a merely nominal cost. Fuel, too, is cheaper here than at any other center in California. It is and will remain the wool market of the State. Consequently, for woolen and other manufacturing purposes, steam power can here be obtained at a less cost than elsewhere. The climate is favorable for working in wool, water is abundant and soft, and rents are cheap. Other advantages will suggest themselves to those conversant with the requirements of the manufacture; but enough have been mentioned to call the attention of the citizens and capitalists to the subject.—Sacramento Bee.

THE FIRST STAGE ACROSS THE PLAINS.—The Grass Valley National says:

The first practical suggestion of the feasibility of a daily stage line from the Missouri river to the Pacific Ocean, was presented to the public through the enterprise of Turner, Allen & Co., in the Spring of 1849. These gentlemen devised a passenger train consisting of 28 spring-wagons, 40 baggage wagons and 200 mules, and advertised for the transportation of passengers from St. Louis to San Francisco. They started with 135 persons, and brought through with comparative comfort 125. The cholera raged fearfully throughout the Valley of the Mississippi, and, of the 17 deaths in the trains, 15 of them were the result of this terrible disorder between the Platte and Missouri rivers. By the trip Turner, Allen & Co. cleared $30,000. On the basis of this experience, James Birch, one of the pioneer stage men on this coast, consulted Mr. Turner as regarded the propriety of establishing a daily overland stage line across the plains. This was the month of January. Mr. Turner advocated the possibility and the policy of the undertaking, and in support of his views, proffered to reconnoiter the Sierra Nevada in the midst of the winter. Mr. Birch assented to the proposition of Mr. Turner, and a time was set for the journey. In the meanwhile, however, something transpired in relation to the business obligations of Mr. Birch which compelled him to visit the East. He started, but during the transit the steamer wrecked, and Birch was among the lost. But for this unfortunate event, doubtless Messrs. Turner and Birch would have inaugurated a daily stage line across the plains in the following Spring. Birch was a man of quick faculties, ready action and audacious enterprise. He commenced his life in California a penniless stage driver, and though quite young, soon became rich through the exercise of these qualities. The pioneers of the State will not forget James Birch.

THE OLD SHIP FOUND AT CAPE COD.—The remains of the old ship supposed to be identical with the one wrecked by Governor Bradford, which was wrecked before a small inland harbor that lies about the middle of Monamoyake Bay, to the southward of Cape Cod, in the beginning of the winter of 1626-7, is now on exhibition on Boston Common, and is attracting considerable attention. Captain R. B. Forbes writes concerning it as follows: "I had a sort of striped pig feeling about it, but on a careful inspection of the ancient remains I became convinced that the wreck certainly dates back beyond the recollection of the oldest inhabitant. It is a great curiosity—a relic which ought never to leave Boston while there are any descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers remaining. I met one of them in the tent; he evidently came in on the sly—but he went out a wiser and a better man."

The Herald reiterates that representations of the state of affairs in Eastern Oregon have been forwarded to the War Department, with a view to prevent the mustering out of the volunteers in service, until such time as the security of the frontier will warrant it.

GREENBACKS IN SHAKESPEARE'S TIME.—The following is from the last number of Puck:

We are sorry to discover that Hamlet was, like the dishonest people whom we see advertised in the newspapers, in the habit of paying his little bills in legal tender notes instead of sterling money. He played some of them off on Poor Ophelia, for we read that Polonius says to her:—

> "Think yourself a baby
> That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay
> Which are not sterling."

We have made a patient search through all the records of the Court of Denmark, during the time of Hamlet, but have been unable to discover at what discount legal tenders were held at that day. Those Danish greenbacks were doubtless printed in order to meet the expenses of the war with Fortinbras. Polonius speaks further on brokers investments:

> "Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
> The better to beguile."

These bonds were no doubt something like the Confederate Cotton Bonds; many a man in England bet high on the success of the South, and brokers sold these bonds "the better to beguile."

MEMORY.—It is supposed by some writers that the memory never really loses an impression, however casually received, or even when unconsciously received. Coleridge mentions a remarkable instance of a servant-maid who, some years after residing in the family of a learned old German divine, was taken with a fever, during the paroxisms of which, she repeated correctly passages from Latin, Greek and Hebrew works. The learned [illegible] was, of course, a nine days' wonder; scholars took down the passages, and found them correct. Where did she, the untutored servant girl, learn them? Inquiry was made respecting her former places of residence, and she was at last traced to the old divine's parsonage. He, it seems, had been in the habit of reading aloud his learned works on his piazza, and was overheard by the servant girl, without an effort, doubtless, on her part to understand or to remember them in her unintelligible jargon. Yet, years after, an abnormal condition of the brain reveals the hidden and distinct impression on her memory of these mere sounds, that had with them no association of ideas whatever.

FAST BUOY.—One of the buoys left by the Great Eastern to mark where the Atlantic cable parted, was lately seen by a vessel in longitude 34 48, over 600 miles east of the point where it was planted, which was in longitude 40 28. That is nearly as good time as the Great Eastern herself can make. The intention of those who left it in mid-ocean was to make the buoy fast, and they seem to have succeeded "beyond the most sanguine expectations."

Major Dent, of Macon, Georgia, is cultivating a plantation, and the other day called upon the Freedmen who formerly belonged to him to know their "intentions." They all agreed to resume work but one, who upon being asked the reason said: "Case I's g'wine to school to learn to read and write, so's I'll not have to hire a lawyer to tend to business." Another example of the African's thirst for knowledge.

MR. SEWARD AND THE FENIANS.—The statement in the British newspapers to the effect that Secretary Seward gave notice to Great Britain of the Fenian movement concerning Ireland, is not believed by persons in Washington who are presumed to be in a position to give the story an unequivocal denial. In the absence of the Secretary from Washington, however, the comments of the English press on the subject are much discovered.

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.—In the matter of finding proper employment for the brave boys who have been partially disabled in the service of their country, Puck begs to suggest that they be appointed conductors on railroad and street cars, in view of the well-known fact that "none but the brave deserve the fare."

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.—The Union Pacific Railroad [illegible] at Omaha, and is being vigorously constructed, and as yet no Government bonds have been issued to it or asked for it. John A. Dix is President; Thomas C. Durant, Vice President; John J. Cisco, Treasurer. It is believed 100 miles of this road, west of Omaha, will be in running order next June.

"What do you intend to do with Jefferson Davis?" asked an Englishman of an intelligent returned soldier the other day. "It would be blasted cruel to be hanging him, you know. Now what do you intend to do with him?" "Borrow St. Helena from her Majesty, and chain him there as you chained Napoleon, you know," was the reply. John Bull could not see the point.

Gen. McGowan, candidate for congress in South Carolina, in an address to his constituents, says: "It is in accordance with our interests and true policy to sustain the President and the Democratic party in their efforts to restore the States to their positions of equality and to give them equal rights in the Government." The interests of rebels and Democrats have been mutual since 1861.

A GOOD PROSPECT.—The Fenians, says the New York Saturday Press, propose to evacuate New York and proceed to take possession of Dublin on or about the 1st of April. It is supposed, however, that there will be Celts enough left among us to fill all the important municipal offices, so that the general condition of the city will probably remain as sound and sweet as it is now!

Harriet Martineau, now in her sixty-fourth year, still continues one of the most active and able writers in the British metropolis. She has just sent to press the last volume of her "History of England during the Great Peace." She is now nearly blind and totally deaf.

The Nashville Press says: "The army of pardon seekers seems to have been more successful than Lee's army was, for it has captured Washington, and pretty well occupied the District of Columbia."

The last number of the Nation, of New York, has a singular announcement, to the effect that in consequence of the great success of the paper, its price will be raised to six dollars.

At a Democratic meeting in Ohio, the orator one day delivered his address from the top of a whisky barrel. Among other remarks, he said, "I stand on the platform of my party."

A Springfield, Ill., dispatch of October 11th says that long trains of wagons, laden with emigrants from Ohio and Indiana, continue to pass through that town en route for Missouri.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 18, 1865

Sources of National Revenue

Hitherto the burden of taxation for the support of the Federal Government has been borne by the North alone. For the future no calculation can be made of the amount of revenue which will flow into the National treasury, the great sum that the South will contribute is to be reckoned along with that which is derived from the North. Owing to the paralyzed condition of Southern industry and the exhaustion of Southern resources, it is not possible to compute with any degree of accuracy what amount the treasury will receive this year and next, from that portion of the Union; but, after the South shall have had a season for recuperation, her contributions to the National revenue will be very great. The staple products of her soil are of the most valuable kinds. It will not be long until they are afforded in the same enormous quantities as before the war. There can not be a doubt that the productive energy of that section ten years hence, will be double what it has ever been. After the lapse of a few years the Government can, at its option, either reduce the taxes so as merely to meet current expenses and pay the interest on the debt, or it can keep them fixed at the present rate and pay the debt altogether.

The Constitution forbids any tax to be laid on articles exported from any State, so that there can be no export duty on cotton or tobacco which may be shipped to Europe; but these commodities may be taxed at home the same as other products. Such is the present, and such for years is likely to be the future demand for these articles in Europe that our Government can lay a considerable tax upon them without at all checking their exportation. Foreign countries will thus be compelled to pay a part of our debt. Exclusive of that grown in the United States, Europe can not be fully supplied with cotton for years to come. We can cause England and France to pay as our home tax of several cents per pound upon this staple, and yet not diminish the foreign demand for it. Cotton is now quoted at fifty cents per pound in the Liverpool market. Before the rebellion, it did not command one fifth of its present price. Here, it will be seen, is quite a margin for a tax upon the article. This, the foreign manufacturer may be compelled to pay.

The cotton crop of the United States in 1860 amounted to twenty-one hundred million pounds. In a few years the amount produced will be as large as it has ever been. A tax of five cents per pound on the crop of 1860 would have yielded above one hundred million dollars. It is said that a tax even larger than this could be laid on that part of the crop which is exported, and yet leave American cotton without competition. The Government would thus derive an immense sum from foreign manufacturers. Tobacco, in like manner will also be made a source of great revenue to the Government. And what is most excellent in these sources of revenue is that the large subsidies we are speaking of will come from other nations to enrich our own.

SNAPPING AT EACH OTHER.—Unmindful of the excellent precepts taught in Watts' beautiful nursery rhymes exhorting children of the same family not to let their angry passions rise, and showing the shamefulness of the spectacle when the children aforesaid fall out and rage and fight, the Democrat and Review are just now "uttering the noisy breath of threatening words," preparatory as it seems, to closing in an unfraternal strife. The Democrat is extremely anxious to preserve the reputation of the "Democratic" family as the exclusive patron of State rights, secession and treason, while the Review wants to get rid of the more odious features of this record, and make an endeavor to rise to at least a partial respectability again. The quarrel is strictly of a domestic nature, and one that originated in considerations which have reference to the present character and future standing of the family. The Democrat upbraids its party for not adhering to its former course, and advises the illiterate and [illegible] sequences, members of the organization not to listen to the new leaders who would perhaps betray them into the hands of an Abolition Administration. The Review replies to this pretentious adviser in a strain of provoking and savage sarcasm, telling him that the "Democracy" of the East committed an egregious blunder in not conferring with the great head of the party in Oregon before venturing to decide upon the adoption of any policy. Further, the Review thinks that an Oregon leader should at once be sent to the East to keep the party straight in that section, and inform it what course it ought to follow. To make the matter complete, it is suggested that a man who is a foreigner by birth, who has been a "Know Nothing," and who on several occasions has apostatized from his own party, should go. The thrusts are cruel. The Review evidently means to cut the company of its old associate. The Democrat will no doubt retort in a spirit savagely as acrimonious as that evinced "by the gentleman who has just taken his seat." Perhaps, out of revenge, it will give us the political history of a somewhat inconstant person connected with the Review. The present feud has been rising for some time and it looks now as if the alienation of these several members of a once concordant family would soon be complete.

In thus cutting loose from the old party it is not improbable that the Review may have it in mind to attach itself to a new one. No doubt it has already found a ground on which it can [illegible]. Already it begins to cast longing glances toward the fold in which the "conservative" politicians of the Statesman school are establishing themselves. The accession of the Review to its ranks will give the "new party" now in process of formation at Salem, a character and completeness which it could not otherwise acquire. The Review and the Statesman may work together for awhile much more harmoniously than the Review and Democrat have lately done.

THE AGRICULTURIST AND PLOWMAN.—E. M. Waite, Esq., has purchased the interest of Mr. A. L. Stinson in the Oregon Agriculturist, and that paper, together with the Plowman, the journal shortly to have been published by Mr. Waite, will be issued hereafter under the name of the Agriculturist and Plowman. We are glad to learn that the two agricultural papers are consolidated into one. The proprietors, Messrs. Waite and Schwatka, will we doubt not make their journal worthy of general patronage. We have received the first number which has been issued since the new arrangement was made, and find it quite up to the standard of a good agricultural paper. Success attend the enterprise.

BURIED, AT LEAST.—The Review of this week contains an article under the caption "Is Democracy dead?" The "Democratic" party of course is especially referred to in this tender inquiry. The writer concludes that "Democracy is not dead and that it will never die." We are reminded of an anecdote of Sir Walter Scott which runs in this wise. One day at table some person or other was made the subject of conversation when Sir Walter remarked that he had lately died—a remark which Mrs. Scott instantly contradicted. "Then," replied the great author "they have done him much injustice for they have certainly buried him." The Review has discernment enough to make the application.

William H. La Mar is the name of the man lately killed near Walla Walla. Two hundred dollars in coin were found upon his person after the murderers left him.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The [illegible] correspondent at El Paso, under date of October 8th, says: The [illegible] sentiment of the [illegible] Juarez is strengthening every day by the adhesion of the population that [illegible] who seem [illegible] and by giving a regular organization to the various [illegible]. He will remain at El Paso for some time.

Marshal Bazaine [illegible] complications with our Government, has given express orders to the officers [illegible] not [illegible] any detachment of French troops approach the Rio Grande.

From the [illegible] of the 14th, we glean as follows:

Monday night the safe of the Orleans Hotel was robbed of $600 in gold dust, belonging to a returning miner from Kootenai and Blackfoot, deposited for safe keeping over night. In addition $3,000 belonging to the proprietors of the house went at the same time. The porter of the establishment was sleeping in the room near the safe, the key of which was in the custody of the landlord. The safe is a small affair, the lock easily picked or turned with a key of common description, and the thief could not have had much trouble in gaining access to the interior. Three men who arrived at the [illegible] time with the man who had the money are suspected of being the perpetrators of the theft. They were sleeping in the house and since the robbery was discovered two of them have not been seen here. A fine overcoat was taken the same night, and doubtless by the same men who broke into the safe. It will be well for our citizens to keep a close watch of their valuables. There are several characters in town whose antecedents do not recommend them as being at all backward in helping themselves to anything they find lying around.

John Clark (Champagne Jack), a packer in the employ of Frank Drake, was shot by Indians on the Owyhee river a few days since. One report says the shot was received through his neck; another that he was shot in the bowels. He was alive by the last accounts received, which express no opinion as to whether the shot would prove fatal.

Fifty men are at work opening a road leading from Umatilla to La Grande and Boise. Work has been going on for the past two months, and it is calculated that the work will be completed by the first of December, or sooner.

A band of cattle numbering 600 head were driven to the Yakima country, crossing the river at this point on Monday. They were the property of — Sharp.

The grand jury of Boise county lately found a true bill against a man for taking a woman against her will and by force and menace compelling her to marry him.

The daily line of steamers from Celilo has been discontinued, and until the close of the river by ice we are to have a steamer every other day.

Pat Malone retires from the management of the Oregon Report. He published his words of parting in the issue of Nov. 11th. Pat is going to Boise City to establish a paper there. He calls his latest born the Idaho Aqua. Since the Union victory in New Jersey Idaho has become what Nasby calls the "Saint's Rest." Unsubjugated "Democrats" will all go to that happy Territory. The people are pushing them thither over the verge of civilization from both extremes of the continent. And after a suitable time shall have elapsed, the dreadful Puritans and hateful Abolitionists will go and take possession of that Territory as they have done the balance of the country. "Democracy" is giving way as rapidly as any barbarism ever yielded to the march of civilization.

YAMHILL COUNTY.—We are informed that the Union Convention of Yamhill county, held at Lafayette last Monday, nominated J. M. Pierce, Esq., for representative to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. Henry Warren. The Copperheads have brought out no candidate yet. They seem to be waiting for an independent candidate to announce himself so that they may unite on a third man with some little hope of success through a division in the opposite party. This we suppose to be the plan also in Polk county. Let Union men look out for Copperhead candidates to crawl from their holes a day or two before the election.

We learn that an attempt was recently made by two Indians to kill a man—name not remembered by our informant—who was on his way from the John Day country to Owyhee. As he was crossing Willow Creek, a tributary of the Malheur, an Indian a few feet distant fired on him with a musket. The ball struck the handle of a large knife which was hanging at his side, shivering it to fragments but inflicting no injury upon his person. The other Indian then fired, the charge lodging in a roll of blankets strapped behind the saddle. The man escaped.

The Court House at Lafayette took fire on the afternoon of the 14th from a flue and the upper part of the building was soon in flames. The Circuit Court was in session at the time, and a large number of men being in attendance the fire was subdued without further loss than the destruction of a portion of the roof. While the fire was raging the contents of the County Clerk's office and of other offices in the building were removed, but the flames being extinguished the books and records were restored at once to their places again.

We have received a copy of the Constitution and By Laws of the California Mining Bureau Association of San Francisco. The object of the Association is to assist in developing the mineral resources of the Pacific coast. In its rooms at San Francisco the Association is to have a laboratory and machinery for reducing ores, together with a most extensive cabinet of mineral specimens. A large library is also to be collected and a reading room is already opened by the Society.

We learn that a man named Todd, a member of Capt. McGowan's Company, was lately shot at Colville. A navy revolver ball entered his mouth, breaking some of his teeth, and passing out through his neck or cheek. The wound is very dangerous but at last accounts the injured man was still alive. The shooting took place in a saloon where the parties were at cards.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE.—A. H. Francis, a colored man formerly a resident of Portland, has been elected to the city Council of Victoria. Wonder if some of our Copperheads who left the United States a while ago with many curses and went to Victoria to reside won't leave in disgust now? Where's young Adair?

Capt. Mahon's Company, 1st Oregon Infantry, stationed for some months past at Colville, arrived yesterday at Vancouver, and are to be mustered out of the service at once. The Clackamas boys will have a hearty welcome at their homes.

The War Department has issued an order that all sea coast forts south of Fortress Monroe, except Forts Taylor and Jefferson in Florida, will be garrisoned by colored troops. The requisite number of regiments has been selected for this duty.

C. J. Judish, Esq., an old and highly esteemed resident of Idaho, died at Boise City Nov. 7th, of apoplexy. He was Assessor of the U. S. Revenue for Idaho Territory.

Hon. A. A. Denny, delegate elect from Washington Territory, was lately robbed of $700 on the road between here and San Francisco.

ROMANCE IN REAL LIFE—A CURIOUS CASE.—A curious case of matrimonial [illegible], so to speak, has been recently developed in this city. Some six or eight years ago a young man became acquainted with a damsel of this city. "She was fair and he not blind," so he became enamored of her, but like a sensible young man he determined not to allow the 'worm i' the bud' to feed upon his cheek, so he told his love, to which the blushing maiden responded with a very plain intimation that she too had felt the sting of Cupid's dart. The priest healed the wounds by uniting them in the holy bonds, etc., and adding something like a curse on the head of the luckless chap who should dare to separate them as a part of the contract they had made. Time fled on; the gentleman with his fair companion dwelt happily together.

But the clouds of war began to grow dark and the lumbering of cannon on the hills and in the valleys proclaimed that there was strife abroad in the land, and those claimed to be Governors and rulers, called loudly for more able-bodied men—not caring particularly whether they were married or not. (Our then Governors will have to meet the curse.) So to the smoky field of battle he went, leaving his fair Dulcinea alone to pine in his absence. (All wives do!) But that great wrecker of all things 'Time,' destroyed the acuteness of her grief, and as he passed on left a less poignant sting in the lonely heart. Almost two years passed away, and the memory of her liege lord came less frequently to her mind. Then news came that he was dead, and she, therefore, was released from further obligation to await his coming. Why should she languish all alone? And now that the wounds of the heart had all been healed and the widow's weeds of sable had faded, she began to think of making some other arrangement for her future happiness. A chance offered.

Again she was wooed and won, and in the joyousness of her new happiness her old love was forgotten in the flow of the bridal veil of a second love. But the gods were adverse, and in a short time she was again a widow, having only enjoyed this second bliss a few weeks. Again the widow's habit was donned, and the fair lady was mourning a second time over her bereavement. Old Time don't stop for anybody's accommodation. Nor did he stop for our heroine. The second grief time had almost passed away, and she only remembered the tomb of her second love as an episode in life common to all. Her liege had shuffled off the mortal coil twelve months ago—and she had forgot her sorrow. The widow's weeds were again thrown aside. Why should she grieve? And she was again almost as gay as in the spring time of life. Why should she not be? But she still cherished the name of her two former lords. All ladies do that! And, of course they suppose no one else ever grieved like them, or were bereaved as they were; but—pshaw! why always think of such gloomy things—is not life bright before them?

Thus reasoned the widow, and wisely, too. 'Twas no use of wasting the brightest days of one's life all because she had been twice unfortunate. So she concluded, and upon that conclusion acted. Well, to make a long story short, a few evenings ago, at the silent hour of [illegible], a stranger might have been seen to stop at the door of a tenement on Second street. Once, twice, thrice he knocked at the door. "Who's there?" A brief explanation and the twice bereaved fair one was enfolded in the warm embrace of her first love, her long lost lord, whom she had mourned as dead. Of course, he had a prior claim to all the others, and she again launches out on the sea of life, with the chosen companion of her earlier days—with the liege to whom she had given her maiden affections. "There be strange things in this curious world of ours."

COOL BUT HARD.—The Sonora Herald relates an incident which is eminently characteristic of men and manners in California:

The other evening, as one of our down town barbers was quietly enjoying his after-supper [illegible], a stranger entered, divested himself of his hat and coat, and seated himself for a shave. The barber performed the operation, our friend arose, donned his apparel, and without as much as "thank you, sir," started for the door. The knight of the razor, not appreciating this way of doing business, called out to him. With one hand upon the door-knob, and raising the other above his head, in broken English the stranger stuttered out: "T-t-two hundred fifty miles from home and not a d——d cent!" and went on his way rejoicing, leaving the astonished barber in a very precarious state of mind.

RIGHTS OF FREEDMEN IN MISSISSIPPI.—Governor Sharkey, under date of September 18th, wrote to Colonel Thomas, Commissioner of Freedmen for Mississippi, as follows:

I have no hesitation in stating, as a necessary result from the action of the Convention, that in my opinion the freedmen can now sue and be sued in any Court in the State, and as incident to the right to protection of person and property, which are fully guaranteed by the amended Constitution, that they are competent to testify in any Court of justice. The privileges, I think, are fully covered by the principles established by the Convention, which abolishes the whole system of slavery, and as a matter of course, any measure or policy which grew out of that system.

George Biddleman, who was sent from Grand Ronde to the Insane Asylum, at Portland, escaped, and is now in Grand Ronde. He says the keepers at the Asylum employed him in digging potatoes and he thought he had better dig them for wages at home than work at the Asylum for nothing. He is said to be perfectly sane.

A Western paper describes brandy manufactured from watermelons, and pronounced it excellent. Intemperate people would think that this was the next thing to extracting "sunbeams from cucumbers."

COMMENDABLE.—Prominent parties in Ada and Boise counties, Idaho, are talking of getting up a large silver brick, to send as a present to Hon. J. M. Ashley, Washington city.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

W[illegible] [illegible].

PORTLAND, November 17th, 1865.

Notwithstanding an apparent dullness in business the last week, trade for the period under review has been good—the demand for most articles ruling not better in the merchandise market than was generally expected. The weather has been bad indeed, and we may well say the rainy season has set in, with a strong tendency to severity. During Friday and Saturday last one and five tenths of an inch of rain fell in this city, and it has been raining almost every day since. The roads are uncommonly bad, considerable snow has fallen in the Blue mountains, and the volume of business for the upper country must be practically closed for the season, else buyers must pay relatively higher for freights, and take greater risks in shipping.

The matter most likely to attract attention for the period under review, is the action being taken in the United States District Court, regarding the late violations of the laws of Congress by the vessels in trade between this port and the port of San Francisco, and the foreign port of Victoria. There are many doubts as to the actual fact of smuggling in these cases, but by the course pursued by the commanders of the Active and Orizaba, which is familiar to our readers, it will be seen that an honest administration of their duties, and a strict regard for law, was not had for the benefit of importers. And, knowing full well that the law had been violated, the Collector could not maintain public respect, or be deserving of it, unless he enforced the law in accordance with his obligations and the best interests of the Government. If no wrong was intended by the disrespect of law, it would have taken but a few hours to return to the Custom House and make the necessary exchange of papers and why this was not done is not sufficiently shown.

The capital of the First National Bank, authorized for this city, will be owned and controlled by some of our home men. Hon. H. W. [illegible] is President and Hon. A. Holbrook Cashier. When the Bank goes into active operation it is expected to offer additional benefits on the State. The reason of the delay in commencing we understand to be the non-arrival of the issue. The introduction of Eastern capital at Eastern rates of interest, the purchase of mining interests, and like matters, are among the benefits which it is claimed for the National Bank in this vicinity.

There appears to be a desire in the East to contract the currency, and it is thought it might be accomplished if the exigencies of the Treasury requirements would permit it to be done by cancelling the legal tender notes received in collecting the internal revenue. Coin received from customs must be devoted to the payment of the interest of the public debt, and until it is so, on imported goods shall be paid in coin. Hence the Secretary of the Treasury cannot adopt [illegible] the recommendation of the President of the New York Chamber of Commerce, for the collection of part of the customs revenue in legal tender notes, in lieu of coin, and it appears unwise to make such recommendation, yet it shows to a great extent the anxiety of people for a contraction of the currency and a consequent resumption of specie payments.

The last monthly statement of passengers by sea arriving and departing from the port of San Francisco, shows an excess of departures of 4,151 for the first ten months of the present year, which may be the secret of the failure of the California press to give publicity, or even honest credit, to visitors from Oregon and Idaho. Montana will be very likely to take off a larger proportion than the [illegible] of the spring months, of the population of California, and the numerous [illegible] of what might be considered permanent citizens of the State who are seeking Oregon to settle in [illegible] is a fair indication that if California now wishes to persist in claiming everything—or rather San Francisco claiming everything for California—then [illegible] plausible [illegible] their claims [illegible] Idaho and Montana connected with that State. Then to read of the receipts of [illegible] amounts of treasure at San Francisco from the "northern counties of this State and Nevada" [illegible] stock circulars will appear more nearer to the truth; until then we shall be obliged to read extracts in the light of falsehoods or [illegible] the first question and assume a prerogative [illegible]. There is no disguising the fact the California papers have ever been attempting to ignore the value and [illegible] of this region of country and while [illegible] of that State have been invested in [illegible] developing the resources of the northern mines, such corporations as the California Steam Navigation Company have countenanced the attempts to bring the whole country into disrepute and secretly and openly worked against its ultimate success. The infamous frauds attempted in favor of the Chico affair will be remembered, although the favorite route of those "enterprising" Californians has been abandoned and [illegible] even so for the fostering care of the military and the Government.

The practice of the Canadians and traders to [illegible] the British possessions near the United States is shown by the following paragraph from the Dalles Mountaineer:

Last spring large quantities of goods were taken to Kootenai and with the depletion of the population [illegible] mines [illegible] thence to Blackfoot [illegible] British goods [illegible] paid British duties [illegible] liable to [illegible] the United States without paying duties [illegible]. Among [illegible] Blackfoot [illegible] pack train [illegible] with goods from Kootenai [illegible] Reservation. It is a hard case all around, that men should buy goods—pay British duties and freight to Kootenai [illegible] and then have their goods taken from them.

It is strongly suspected [illegible] for San Francisco [illegible] of the [illegible] from Victoria. This rock was taken from [illegible] to the Cariboo country [illegible] the purpose of testing it with a view of [illegible] mines. [illegible] Our English cousins will have more to fear from this policy than from any threatened invasion by the Fenians and might better [illegible] attempt [illegible] administration [illegible] on such [illegible] basis.

An important mining case is attracting great attention just now concerning the Poor Man ledge. It appears that some time since an injunction restraining the Poor Man Company from taking ore from their ledge was granted by Milton Kelly of Owyhee, acting as Judge. A motion to dissolve the injunction against the defendants was denied, and the matter is resting in that shape until a trial of the case can be had. The plaintiffs, the New York and Idaho Company and others, claim that the Poor Man is only a continuation of the Hays and Ray ledge. The property amounts to millions, the Poor Man being nearly a solid silver ledge. The announcement of granting the injunction and disallowing its discontinuance is said to be a fear that the Poor Man company will take out many hundreds of thousands before the matter is finally settled, and at the same time there appears evidence to show that the ledge was not found in the Hays and Ray as alleged, but it is shown that it is a distinct ledge, and that for three hundred feet on the Hays and Ray before it intersects with the Poor Man there was no indication of a ledge. The action of the Court may be plainly stated to be no less than retarding the development of the ledge.

During the week we hear of a few transfers of mining shares, but are without prices. Money is active, but we have no changes to note. Legal tenders dull sale at 68@69 cts.

Wholesale and Jobbing Prices.

PORTLAND, November 17th, 1865.

Trade is comparatively good in articles coming under this head. Liquors are firm, but our prices will be seen to favor the purchasers in this market. Stocks are well supplied. Shippers complain that the steamships coming to this port are not kept free enough from rats and that rattage is becoming altogether too large an item in their profit and loss accounts. Some changes will be observed in prices. Kerosene is gradually approaching a solid value, and there are indications of returning confidence in the article.

Domestic Produce Market.

PORTLAND, November 17, 1865.

The rains of the week have rendered the roads leading to this city very bad, and but little produce is arriving in wagons. The Willamette, however, has increased in the volume of its waters, and increased activity will be felt in the market for the approaching week.

The demand for flour has greatly diminished and the receipts are placed in storage to a considerable extent, augmenting supplies largely, and prices are expected to gradually settle downward, unless an impetus is given to the markets elsewhere. It is thought by some that were a vessel available for charter she could be freighted for Australia and be a source of profit to the charterers, but no movement tending to the enterprise is noted. There is no demand, except local, at present, for flour and wheat and prices can scarcely maintain themselves. Oats are still firm, and in consequence of a scarcity are jobbing at 70 cts ℔ bushel to day. There is a considerable amount of lard now being on making its appearance in market and prices are drooping; otherwise we have no particular changes to note in prices.

Weekly Retail Family Market.

FRIDAY, November 17th 1865.

The supply of fresh butter is not very much greater to-day than for last week and prices remain high. Much has been said in this paper from time to time for a year past with reference to butter, and the dairy should occupy more attention and take a more prominent place in the minds of agriculturists. The supply of Eastern, or what is commonly called by the dealers Isthmus butter, comes principally from Orange and Herkimer counties in New York and sells readily here at 50c ℔ lb. It costing but a fraction to import, dealers are said to deal in the article pretty extensively, and this increase in demand for butter being in excess of the increase of its manufacture here, they have been partially obliged to deal in Isthmus butter. An Orange county dairyman recently furnished the Boston Cultivator with some interesting facts and figures relative to the subject of butter and cheese making, showing the products of twenty-three cows in the amounts of dividends from manufactures, sales of milk, calves in the spring, and all included a little less than $100 per cow for one season. Oregon farmers would be made to do much better than this. Here the [illegible] attending the [illegible] the owners have the opportunity of feeding nearly double the profits of [illegible] cows. Our climate enables them to make all the butter demanded to be consumed here, and while Oregon occupies [illegible] there and the level portions of the eastern portion of the State and farther beyond calls for many hundreds of pounds more of it. We [illegible] to part [illegible] with a few words in reference to the [illegible] In the retail market [illegible] in them.

A farmer resident of Herkimer county now located at Lake river in Washington Territory has placed upon the market about two tons of as fine cheese as could be asked for. And the product of one or two other dairies in this vicinity shows that the soil and climate here, and that for purity, beauty and richness, cannot be excelled. Mr. Hathaway, the maker of the [illegible] referred to, makes annually from three to five tons of cheese, and for three years it has commanded the largest margin of price. California cheese and butter cannot compare with the cheese and butter we have in Oregon, but the complaint is that our makers are too few.

Eggs are dear, scarce, and but few are positively coming into market. Some dealers are getting good stock, and also to a certain extent of packages mostly put up for the winter trade. There will be a limited and irregular supply until the close of the holiday season. Now about to come in [illegible] Thanksgiving Dinners, we fear [illegible] observed this year in November according to old time custom [illegible] until the general [illegible] and Thanksgiving [illegible] by the President for next month. [illegible] will certainly be [illegible] well regulate [illegible] as well as if they had [illegible] in New England, [illegible] Thursday [illegible] is not a day in general observance in the State. [illegible] all as to the holidays are already being made [illegible] few dealers.

Woolen and Cotton Goods.

PORTLAND, November 17th, 1865.

There is still an active demand for several of the [illegible] woolen goods, and [illegible]. In the absence of quotations the best grades of Oregon [illegible] all wool command the highest prices and are much sought for. A card of ten samples of Willamette woolen goods destined for the Eastern market was shown us yesterday and they will be very likely to attract great attention in New York, and give an increased demand [illegible] article of Oregon wool in future in that market. In this branch of industry and the growing of fine wool, our State is making rapid advances and fast assuming a grand position.

During the period under review the Oregon Woolen Factory has started to the filling of [illegible]. We have seen none of the goods as yet, but are informed that they are unexcelled for beauty of finish, texture and desirableness.

In cotton goods there are no changes to note. Market is firm. Clothing is advancing in the San Francisco market, and there were but few arrivals to replenish stocks at latest dates. The Eastern markets are still very firm.
